

Reimagining Healthcare & Community

Community members from All Brains Belong shared what it's like to be part of a new kind of healthcare

At All Brains Belong, healthcare is not just about doctor visits.

Healthcare also includes:

- Making friends
- Getting support for jobs and daily life
- Learning what your brain and body need

Some big ideas in this model are:

- Healthcare is more than just treating illness
- There's no one "right" way to think, learn, or communicate
- Ask people what they need, big changes start by listening to the community
- Belonging to a community helps people feel better

Universal design means giving people lots of different choices so everyone can find what works best for them.

Instead of just one way to do something, there are many options. People get to choose what helps them the most.
